Quality Time – Essential to Parent–Child Relationship?

Time Management, in today's World, is the key to prioritizing tasks that are deemed important by us, for a more meaningful and fulfilling life. In the context of Parent–Child understanding, Quality Time, has significant implications in promoting an environment that fosters harmony on matters that might arouse contrasting and contentious views.

The Parent-Child interactions require a deft and sensitive handling, of concerns that have become all too familiar in a tech dominated world of the young. The child of today is a product of an era of information and knowledge, unprecedented in history. At his/her fingertips is a Universe that is shaping every aspect of our lives. The Young display an increasingly independent streak at a much earlier stage than ever before. They are not just that, but more, their mental prowess justifies a bravado that has accentuated the generational divide. This is where Parents need to step-back, and re-evaluate their role, as the child's journey keeps on evolving. No longer the lame excuse of not having enough time for their children will be acceptable.

Do you know the pitfalls your child has to face while growing up? In your own Society and beyond? Have you ever talked about issues? Or perhaps you were too self-absorbed and if something that happened jolted you out of your slumber, you could not understand the reason why? Then, putting it mildly, quit being an Ostrich, with your head buried in the sand. Parents have to engage with their children, to understand what is engaging them – their pursuits, academic and non-academic, interests that maybe healthy or those that may raise alarms. As an observer, as a guide, as an eternal well-wisher, as a friend, as a confidant, as a therapist, as a staunch supporter and above all that Parental figure of comfort and strength, no matter what the circumstance – you are all that for your child, only if you take out the time. Quality Time with Parents is what every child deserves. You may be a banker, architect, trader, business-person, agriculturist, a government-servant, a soldier, an educationist, tailor, retailer, social-worker, mufti, imam, sportsman, journalist, aviator, stock-broker, gardener, transporter, fashion-designer, beautician or a member of the royalty – if you have 'a child' or 'children', please give each and every one of them – Quality Time!

FINAL PTM OF 2024

The Fourth and Final Parent Teacher Meeting of 2024, for Grades I to X, was held this past Saturday at their respective campuses. A good turnout of Parents was reflective of Parental interest in the learning empowerment of their children, and to reaffirm a mutual commitment, of both the Parents and the School, in focusing on the growth and development of the students, for a rewarding and fulfilling tomorrow.

WINDS OF CHANGE

The advent of Autumn/Fall is accompanied by a perceptible drop in temperatures – especially early morning and evenings. It is also the time when clinics overflow with patients down with Flu-like symptoms and respiratory ailments. Throwing caution to the wind, people resist wearing warmer attire and inevitably catch the proverbial bug! And literally everyone has a prescription of their own to tout – do not restore to pill popping and cough syrup binging interludes. Rather take a common-sense approach to getting back on the track – drink plenty of fluids, especially water and warm beverages while avoiding so-called juices. Soups, especially Yakhni made from chicken broth, is highly recommended. Avoid close quarters – crowded places, wear a mask while stepping outside and get good rest.

PRESCHOOL FIELD TRIPS

Age-appropriate field-trips have been a feature of this year's school excursions. Each section has organized entertaining trips and highly energized sporting activities, and last week our Preschool was no exception – our very young scholars were taken to an animal-themed park for an up-close but safe introduction to members of the animal kingdom. The kids had a Jolly Good Time!

ADMISSIONS FOR SESSION 2025

Like previous years, an early Admissions & Registration process facilitates Parents seeking admissions for siblings, and those who want to ensure that because of limited seats they are able to complete all the formalities well in time. The Admission Counter at The Reception is open daily, Monday to Saturday, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon. Admissions are being accepted for Prenursery, Nursery and Kindergarten, and Primary Grades I to V.
