Summer Care and Climate Awareness for Children

With the weather becoming increasingly hot and unpredictable due to seasonal climate shifts, it is important to take extra care. Parents are advised to ensure children stay well-hydrated, wear light and breathable clothing, and apply sunscreen if exposed to the sun. Encourage indoor activities during peak heat hours and include plenty of fruits and fluids in their diet. As we adapt to changing climate patterns, these small precautions can go a long way in keeping our children safe, healthy, and comfortable through the summer months.
